

The course aims to train practitioners who can promote health and well-being practices of the mother-father-child triad during the time of breastfeeding.

The training is based on the theoretical and methodological model of the Reich Institute, based on the unitary and complex bio-emotional and energetic aspects of human systems and on the scientific studies and research on perinatality.

The course also uses the WHO-UNICEF training model and trainers on breastfeeding.

The Course is accessible to all the operators of the psychological, social health and educational field and to all the people interested in the themes of the promotion of health in the primary phases of life.
